The prices listed on this sheet represent those charged for a direct cremation, the most economical method that a family can accomplish the respectful disposal of a loved one's body. It involves transporting the body to the funeral home, care of the body, placing it in an alternative container (alternative to a casket such as cardboard or fiberboard that is consumed with the body), transporting the body to the crematorium, cremation, processing of the death certificate and deliver of the ashes (cremains) to the family. It does not include embalming, a visitation or service. Many families plan memorial services later at a more convenient time and place.

Our mission is to educate and support families and individuals in making informed decisions about death related services consistent with their values and lifestyles

At no extra charge, many funeral directors provide a private viewing of the body for the immediate family members and help with a obituary. Others charge extra for those services so ask about any fees not included in the stated price for direct cremation. The cremation fee charged by the crematorium should be included but check it. Unless you purchase an urn or other container, the ashes will be delivered in an inexpensive package such as a plastic bag in a cardboard box. The package should contain a charred metal coin stamped with a number that goes through the burning process with the body. It is how the crematoriums keep from mixing up the identity of the cremains.
